What I Can Offer to Campaign Assistant Role?

I am a long-time Labour Party supporter and an admirer of Mr Corbyn. I am worried about the decline of the Left in the face of a social climate that should be moving citizens towards socialist politics but inexplicably appears to be moving people in the opposite direction. This gives me energy, as a father and a member of society, to attempt to persuade voters that the real enemy is the global corporations and a wealthy elite.

I have skills and experience ideal for duties from pushing leaflets through letter boxes to more sophisticated research and support for any candidates.

I have experience copy-writing, the ability to read documents, fact-check and distil them into an easily digestible form.

I am well organised and able to organise others.

My age and experience in business mean I understand the rigours of the commercial world and the importance of issues such as deadlines; this will hopefully be transferrable to the rigours of the political environment.
